

ABSENT-MINDED

Synonyms: dreamy, vacant, blank

The typical 'absent-minded professor,' he walks around in a cloud, coming up with the most ingenious ideas but forgetting where he is half the time.

Details and specifics escape her. She is much more interested in pursuing the overview of a matter than "wasting time" on the mundane bits and pieces.

This is the type of person who could spend hours looking for her reading glasses, only to find they were on top of her head all the time.

He gets so caught up in what he is doing that he forgets to eat, and birthdays and anniversaries go by the board.

If she doesn't write everything down, it disappears from her mind as quickly as the mist on the bathroom mirror.