

AFFECTIONATE

Synonyms: caring, loving, devoted, tender, warm

Your companion must be openly affectionate and ready to receive the extravagant gifts that you like to give.

As long as you have someone to love who is willing to express his affections openly, you are happy.

Pleasing others is a way of life for you. You would do well in careers that involve serving and caring for peoples' needs, such as nursing or teaching.

Your devotion to the people close to you suggests a warm, affectionate individual who is happiest in the company of others. Without someone on whom to shower your affections, you get uneasy, even depressed.

Clearly, you need hugging and touching and verbal expressions of love as much as you need food to eat and water to drink.

This individual is genuinely affectionate, he just does not know how to express it unhampered. He wants so much to be more than he is. He just was never shown how to open the heart and mind, how to learn about love.

Creating opportunities to show the ones you love how you feel is what makes your life worthwhile.

If your loved ones are happy, you are happy.

It is of paramount importance to you to have the freedom to express your affections openly. A closed, rigid partner leaves you feeling miserable and bereft.

Harmonious relationships are extremely important to you. Your kind, thoughtful way of dealing with others fosters positive connections.

Your effusiveness may scare off some more retiring types. Not everyone is comfortable with warm hugs. You may need to give some people a bit more space.

It is uncomfortable to you when new acquaintances put their hands on you. You have a strong need for personal space and want to be the one who decides when physical contact is appropriate.

Although you may deeply want to reach out and make contact with someone, there is a hesitation to take the first step, a fear of physical touching.