

MATERIALISTIC

Synonyms: opulence, luxury, extravagance, profligate, lavish, spendthrift

You have a strong interest in material things and are concerned with obtaining the creature comforts that will enhance your living environment.

Money seems to be the biggest value in this man's life. Nothing else is looked to for personal meaning and security and no amount of money would ever solve the need for personal meaning and inner strength.

A desire to possess what he values results in a pattern of accumulating power, objects and money on which to furnish a sense of inner security.

Driven by a need to accumulate material wealth, he is less interested in philosophical or spiritual values.

Her desire to build up her financial security is an incentive to produce in a sales position.

It isn't so much that she loves money, but it is the comforts it can buy that so attract her.

If this guy gives an expensive gift, he really had to have an overwhelming inspiration to do it and it took a lot for him to part with it.

Do you hold on to what you accomplish, to what you garner, to what you have, or is that faucet of your wherewithal dipping away wastefully? And thereupon hangs the tale of your insecurity.

You have a tremendous appetite for material things, which may be in the form of food, money, or...?

Proud to be a capitalist, this individual thinks that the interests of business should always be to the fore.